ON FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 16TH - JUST IN TIME FOR THANKSGIVING

Bretton Woods is a Winter Wonderland – Just in Time for the Holidays

BRETTON WOODS, NH, November 16, 2007 – Mount Washington Resort has been turned into a winter wonderland, while regions further south have received rain. Bretton Woods, part of Mountain Washington Resort, has received 8-12” of natural snow today, with snow flurries continuing this afternoon. According to Chris Ellms, Director of Mountain Operations at Bretton Woods, there was a loss of power for about three hours this afternoon, but power has been fully restored to the Resort and the snowmaking guns are once again at work, adding to the bountiful natural snowfall. At the alpine area, skiers and riders can expect to be skiing from the summit, with three lifts and at least ten trails by the end of the weekend.

The Bretton Woods Nordic Center will open tomorrow, on Saturday, with three kilometers of skate groomed terrain, as well as plenty of backcountry opportunities.

Bretton Woods is open daily for the skiing and riding season.
